6. Definitions

6.1 Learning Management System (LMS)

- | A computerised training system which charts all learners, lists the training required for each grade of staff and indicates the date training was completed or expired. Sometimes a traffic light system is adopted, i.e. GREEN shows compliant, YELLOW shows training is due to expire and RED shows training has expired. External training providers often provide companies with their own LMS platform for this purpose

6.2 Training Matrix

- | Though similar to an LMS, a Training Matrix tends to be an inhouse system. Again, a traffic light system shows progression for staff, identifying any outstanding training which needs to be focused on. As with the LMS, there is a list of staff of different grades and the training required

6.3 Accredited Training

- | Accredited Training means that all training has to meet an educational standard (level 2, 3, etc). Training has an Awarding Body, e.g. IOSH for 'IOSH Managing Safely'. Accredited training is externally verified to ensure that standards are maintained (similar to OFSTED in schools). This will ensure that employers have a guarantee as to the quality of training provided

6.4 Externally Verified

- | All training which is accredited has to be externally verified against a given standard to ensure compliance against that standard. Externally means that the standard is monitored outside of the company delivering the training so that there is not a conflict of interest and employers can be assured they are receiving quality training
- | Training providers who do not meet the high standards set can lose their registration - this ensures that only quality trainers will give accredited courses which meet the standard

6.5 Competent

- | Competent or competence - this is where a member of staff has received the necessary induction, instruction, training and supervision, then through experience in that role is able to attain the required operating standard to complete a task repeatedly to a safe and high standard

6.6 Continual Professional Development (CPD)

- | To ensure that staff can operate safely, effectively and competently within their area of responsibility, ongoing training is required. This is known as CPD, or for nurses, 'Revalidation,' in which staff must demonstrate that their practice is up-to-date by ensuring that they are aware of legal updates, industry best practice etc. Undertaking refresher training facilitates this continual improvement in work practices

6.7 Feedback Sheets

- | These are completed by all learners to ensure that the strengths and weaknesses of the training provided are identified and courses reviewed accordingly
